

Reindeer

00:01	This is Sari. She's a reindeer.
00:05	In the spring she always loses her antlers.
00:08	This spot is still bright red, which means the antlers only fell off a short while ago.
00:15	This is what the antlers looked like: just like a piece of wood.
00:26	Sari's always really sad when she loses her antlers, even though they soon grow again.
00:33	The new antlers are as soft as velvet – and look much nicer.
00:42	Only the males of most species of deer have antlers.
00:48	And they're huge!
00:55	The females never have any.
01:01	Whatever the time of year.
01:06	Only reindeer females have antlers too.
01:15	Perhaps this is why Sari's so sad when she loses hers.
01:27	Poor Sari. Don't be sad.
01:38	She loses her fur in the spring, too. But she's pleased about that.
01:47	You can find it everywhere. Big clumps of it.
01:59	Her winter fur would be much too warm.
02:07	There are cast-off antlers everywhere.
02:11	Some are so heavy that my little brother can hardly lift them up.
02:17	These could be Sari's.
02:25	Perhaps she's missing them.
02:30	Yes, these are hers. They're still bright red, because they've only just fallen off.
02:38	Wait, Sari, I'll bring them to you!
02:45	Have a look!
02:50	Look after your old antlers until the new ones grow – and don't be sad any more!
