Learn and play with Daddy

In these days, children often do not find much time to spend with busy-working fathers. Our goal of this particular program is to encourage busy-working fathers to spend more time with their children, showing them where to go as well as teaching children how nature is in fathers' own words. Mr. Yoon, father, working for a surgical appliance company, said that he's been very ashamed of not spending much time with his daughter, Hyun. In this specific piece, Mr. Yoon took her daughter to the seaside and catch shell fish (very popular Korean shell fish, "Maat" cf. scientific name: Solen strictus).

Mr. Yoon, explains that so many little animals live under the sea sand, including "Maat", the Korean shell fish. Catching this particular kind of shell fish is quite interesting, because they hate salt, therefore once we pour salt on the holes, they came out from their house under sand. Many kids find it very interesting, including Hyun.

After catching shell fish, Mr. Yoon suggests to let them go, telling his daughter, "When Hyun was lost, you missed Mom and Dad, right? These little shell fish must feel the same way. Let them go home." Hyun agrees. She learns the most important thing in her lifetime from her father, "love."
