

3.23

The art group

Painting each other

There is a long tradition of painting portraits. The artist normally had the opportunity to work without being worked on at the same moment. In this item this isn't so. The children draw each others image simultaneously.