Sevval is a 10 year old girl at 5 th grade.

She has been diabetic since she was 7.

She has to take insuline injections during the day according to her blood glucose test results. She is very extrovert and full of life. Generally her mother takes care of her testing and injecting by saying the dosage has to be taken. Are these injections disturbing her life? Never.. She makes sports, joins every activity and plays everything with her friends. The only thing she has to pay attention is her meals and the timing of the injections.

Her school friends are now used to her diabet and to see her using an insuline pen . At first they were asking interesting questions but now they think it is not an abnormal thing besides she has friends helping her.

Sevval's biggest dream is to spent a night with her friend freely without her mother. She could never do it before since she has another special insuline injection which can be done only by her mother at nights. It is called LANTUS. She is not able to do this by herself yet, that's why always other girl friends stay for a sleepover in her house but she can not go them. It has become a passion to stay a sleepover with her friend without her mother. Freedom, freedom, freedom..

And one day something changes and at the last visit of her doctor they hear a new thing....
