Malmö using ferrets to control exploding rat population ahead of Eurovision

2:07 min | My playlist | Share

Published fredag 15 mars kl 11:30

- Malmö's rat problem has led to the city to turn to medieval methods to clean-up the city ahead of the Eurovision Song Contest, being held there in May.
- Rat-catcher Mona Ghalayini, who has been contracted to curtail the rodent population, is using ferrets and dogs in tandem.
- "The ferrets are put into a hole and the dogs catch them when the rats come out on the other side," she tells Swedish Radio's local channel in the city, P4 Malmöhus.

Family doctors in Bavaria: Are there enough or too few?

Doctor Karin Berger could already be retired: But she continues to practice: She doesn't want to abandon her patients.

BR/Daniela Olivares

Family doctor Karin Berger from Schrobenhausen in southern Bavaria measures blood pressure, informs about a vaccination and finally vaccinates one of her patients. Four more are waiting in the waiting room. As usual, Karin Berger is very busy, even though the 67-year-old could actually already be retired. "I keep going because I don't want to let my patients down," she says.
